Thousands are attending a vigil at the London Muslim Mosque honouring the five family members struck by a vehicle on Sunday night. Prime Minister Justin Trudeau and Premier Doug Ford are among the massive crowd gathered. bddy.me/3zci1km

La scène à London ce soir était à fendre le cœur. Après le chagrin vient l'engagement. Nous devons nous engager à travailler, toutes allégeances confondues et avec les premiers ministres et les maires, pour mettre un terme au genre de violence et de haine qui a pris ces vies.

Around this time last year, we had the George Floyd racism psy-op. Trudeau took part in protests, despite making a complete mockery of the CV psy-op. Understandably, a lot of people were confused by this. Even Theresa Tam supported such protests, as long as people wore masks. How things change.

The novel coronavirus is responsible for destroying economies everywhere (we are told), but as long as woke causes are being protested, it stays away. How considerate.

Now, in the wake of 4 people being killed in London, ON, Doug Ford and Justin Trudeau have apparently both showed up to a crowded vigil. This comes in the middle of (what they call) the 3rd wave of a deadly pandemic. However, people are not dropping dead.

Conservative Party Leader Erin O'Toole also saw fit to attend this memorial.

Disclaimer: while there is a lot that still needs to be shared publicly, everything about this incident so far seems to be off. That said, things could actually be exactly as they reported.

CBC staff typically go out of their way to avoid mentioning details about the background of a suspect in a crime. However, that isn't the case here.

Doug Ford has imposed what are possibly the greatest restrictions to civil rights anywhere in North America. However, he's quite fine with making exceptions to gatherings when it comes to a public memorial and condemnation of white supremacy and white violence.

Apparently, the deadliest virus in history is respectful enough not to attack helpless people at such vigils. That is one smart virus.

Now, this is giving some strange vibes. What could possibly be causing doubt of the official narrative?

Remember this? A few years back, an 11 year old girl and her 8 year old brother staged a hate crime. Who comes up with such an idea for a hoax? This was perpetuated in the media long after it had been exposed as a hoax, in order to drum up racial tensions in Canada.

A lot of taxpayer money is being spent to reinforce the idea that Canadians are racist. Of course, as long as such money is forthcoming, the problem is unlikely to disappear.

Keep in mind, these are only some of the recent grants provided by the Federal Government. Provinces and Municipalities are almost certainly kicking in large amounts of money as well.

Canada's Trudeau vows to fight far-right groups after Muslim family slain

Steve Scherer and Carlos Osorio

Tue, June 8, 2021, 10:45 AM · 4 min read

As if on cue, Trudeau is pledging to fight "far right" groups, which is essentially anyone he ideologically disagrees with. How convenient this anti-Muslim attack gave him an excuse to go after such groups.

> Waight told the news conference it wasn't certain if the accused was affiliated with any specific hate group.

Never mind that this person isn't alleged to be part of any hate group, but why should that get in the way of a good story? Perhaps there will a corresponding crack down on free speech to prevent the radicalization of such people in the future.

The Nova Scotia mass shooting in 2020 was used as an excuse to do a mass gun ban. It seems likely that this will be used for similar purposes.

A fully constructed wikipedia page on the attack was posted online in under 24 hours.

Every authority involved proclaimed this a premeditated Islamophobic mass murder terror attack within hours!

The PM, the head of a Canadian Muslim rights org, the police chief and mayor of London.

All before police officers were even done gathering evidence at the scene.
